

Please reconsider lifting the ban on cross-ownership. That ban is necessary in limiting the power of those who disseminate information. Concentration of the airwaves and newspapers into too few hands will only lead to one-dimensional thinking and an uninformed public. I fear that the FCC is attempting to silence the public and make it easier for major corporations to control lines of thought in this country. This is evidenced by not only this review of cross-ownership, but by the FCC's refusal to allow low power FM stations the rights to broadcast. Please show me that these are not your goals and that the best interests of the American people are, in fact, important to you.